Sudanese Agency for Reconstruction & Sustainable Development (SARSD)

Towards Rebuilding People, Communities

The Sudanese Agency for Reconstruction & Sustainable Development (SARSD) works to support national recovery and sustainable development efforts in Sudan through integrated humanitarian and development programs targeting communities affected by conflict, disasters, and socio-economic challenges.

Who We Are

The Sudanese Agency for Reconstruction & Sustainable Development (SARSD) is an independent, non-profit national development organization operating in the fields of humanitarian relief, recovery, reconstruction, sustainable development, community peacebuilding, economic empowerment, and social cohesion, guided by a professional institutional approach grounded in transparency, accountability, and effective partnerships.

SARSD was established under the Sudanese Voluntary and Humanitarian Work Act and possesses full legal personality, with the capacity to expand through branches and offices within Sudan and abroad in accordance with operational needs and strategic partnership programs.

The Agency seeks to contribute to rebuilding Sudan and strengthening community stability and inclusive development through the design and implementation of integrated humanitarian and development programs that respond to the needs of communities affected by conflicts, disasters, and socio-economic challenges, while focusing on building resilient and sustainable communities.

SARSD adopts a comprehensive development approach that combines emergency humanitarian response, early recovery programs, long-term development, socio-economic empowerment, and digital transformation, thereby enhancing opportunities for stability, development, and self-reliance.

The Agency works in partnership with government institutions, regional and international organizations, the private sector, academic and research institutions, and local communities to achieve sustainable development impact that supports reconstruction, peacebuilding, and national development in Sudan.

Vision

To become a leading national platform for reconstruction, sustainable development, and peacebuilding, contributing to the creation of stable, prosperous, and resilient communities while achieving equitable and inclusive development for present and future generations.

Mission

We work to empower communities affected by crises and conflicts and actively contribute to rebuilding Sudan and restoring its communities in the post-war context through innovative and sustainable humanitarian and development programs that place people at the center of development.

Our work promotes stability and social cohesion, economically and socially empowers women and youth, improves the quality of essential services, protects the environment, and supports economic, social, and digital transformation through effective strategic planning, sound governance, and strong national, regional, and international partnerships that advance human dignity and sustainable development.
